FAMILY OF 7 KILLED AT RICE R. R. CROSSING

NORTHERN PACIFIC PASSENGER TRAIN HITS AUTOMOBILE

DEAD INCLUDE JOHN MOGEL, HIS WIFE AND FIVE SMALL CHILDREN

WRECK OF LIGHT CAR STREWN ALONG TRACKS FOR 300 FT., AS WERE BODIES

Rice, Minn., Sept. 13.—(UP)—An entire family of seven persons was probably instantly killed when a Northern Pacific local passenger train struck a motor car on an open grade crossing near here last night.

The dead are: John Mogel, 29, farmer living near here; Mrs. Mogel, 24; and their five children, Alois, 5, Veronica, 4, Sophia, 3, Gertrude, 2, and a baby of five months.

But meagre details were available today, indicating the train crew did not see the car until after the crash. The wreck of the light motor car was strewn along the tracks for 300 feet as were the seven bodies.

J. C. Friesleben, county coroner, announced that no inquest will be held as the accident was plainly the fault of the motorist.

Rice, Sept. 13.—The bodies of John Mogel, his wife and their five children lay in the Bremer undertaking parlor here today while authorities sought to learn the cause of the automobile-train crash which wiped out the entire family.

The young farm couple, who lived between Rice and Royalton, were returning home with their children from the latter town last evening when their light automobile was struck on an open crossing three miles north of here by Northern Pacific passenger train No. 11.

Apparently the force of the impact killed all seven persons immediately for when the train was brought to a stop, the crew rushed back to find the bodies inert and the wreckage of the small car strewn along the right-of-way for a distance of 300 feet. The dead were: John Mogel, 29; Mrs. Mogel, 24; Alois, 5; Veronica, 4; Sophia, 3; Gertrude, 2, and a five-months old baby girl.

Relatives of the Mogel family gathered here today to arrange for the funeral.

Joseph Warzecha, Mrs. Mogel's brother, said it was not yet decided whether burial would be at Royalton or at Avon, from whence the family moved here last spring.

Meanwhile it was said authorities planned no inquest since the crash was obviously accidental.

An inspection of the crossing today where the Mogel car was struck revealed no obstruction and there was no apparent reason why the accident should have occurred.

Gary, Ind., Sept. 13.—Seven persons were killed when a grand trunk freight train crashed into a tourist automobile near here early today. An eighth occupant of the automobile, a 7-year-old boy, was injured fatally.

According to identification found on the bodies, the dead were believed to be D. S. Pollock, 59, Lilboern, Mo.; Howard Smith, 38, Dearborn, Mich.; C. C. Mainord, 35; his wife; Mrs. Anna Jones, 24; a baby boy about 20 months old and a baby girl. All of the victims except Pollock and Smith were believed to be from Matthews, Mo.

The train demolished the car and ran on for more than a quarter of a mile before it could be brought to a stop.

St. Paul, Sept. 13.—Organized action is necessary to prevent crossing accidents, such as occurred late yesterday at Rice, Minn., Frank W. Matson, president of the newly organized Minnesota safety council, declared here today.

Matson, a member of the state railroad and warehouse commission, pointed out that the seven deaths swelled the crossing accidents to 42 for the eight months of this year, an increase of 56 per cent over last year, in proportion to the number of automobiles registered.

The safety council head advised motorists to drive not more than 15 miles an hour in crossing areas.

MIMIC WAR DEVELOPS INTO REAL CLASH

POLISH TROOPS, 40, WOUNDED IN WAR MANEUVERS NEAR KRAKOW

CAVALRY FAILS TO HALT AND DASHES INTO INFANTRY, GAS QUIETS BOTH

Berlin, Sept. 13.—(UP)—Forty men were wounded when mimic war maneuvers of Polish troops near Krakow accidentally became a real battle, a Warsaw dispatch said today.

During maneuvers between the infantry and cavalry, a cavalry detachment, making a mimic dash at the infantry failed to halt at the specified distance of 100 yards from the foot troops and rode into the ranks.

The infantry was forced to defend itself with its bayonets from being trampled to death by the horses. At the height of the melee, an infantry commander, with presence of mind, ordered a cloud of gas sprayed on the men. The action checked the cavalry rush.

GOV. SMITH ANSWERS GOSSIP

STATEMENT CAPTIONED "NAILING A LIE IN THE WHISPERING CAMPAIGN"

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 13.—(UP)—Friends of Governor Alfred E. Smith believed today that he had effectively scotched all gossip to the effect that he is a drunkard.

Charges of drunkenness are nothing new in the life of the democratic presidential candidate. Few persons believed, however, that he would come out as boldly as he did today with a long signed statement in which he took official cognizance of the so-called "whispering slander."

Smith's statement was captioned "Nailing a Lie in the Whispering Campaign."

The statement dealt with a letter Mrs. Florence Sanford of Syracuse is said to have written to a Mrs. William L. Bauer of Parkersburg, W. Va., which was alleged to have said that Governor Smith was so intoxicated at the state fair at Syracuse, N. Y., that he had to be assisted to rise when he made a speech.

The statement said that the governor made no speech from the box at the races and that the governor gave no indication of having had a drink.

The statement added that Wm. H. Kelley, democratic leader in Syracuse, made a report on a conversation he had with Mrs. Sanford in which she admitted writing a letter to Mrs. Bauer, but denied charging the governor was intoxicated and denied having seen the governor at the races. She said she opposed Governor Smith's prohibition views.

Smith terminated his lengthy statement by saying:

"If Mrs. Bauer made the statements attributed to her by Mr. Keenan and Mrs. Sanford made the statements attributed to her by Mr. Kelley, both can not be telling the truth. Which of the two women involved is guilty of the slander I do not know."

Los Angeles, Sept. 13.—(UP)—Prosecution rebuttal witnesses were heard today and the case of Leo Kelley, accused of the murder of Mrs. Myrtle Mellus, was expected to reach the jury tomorrow.

Hurricane of Great Intensity Passing Over Virgin Islands Today, Report No Casualties

STORM BEGAN AT MIDNIGHT, IT IS STATED

REPORTS OF STORM RAGING IN FRENCH WEST INDIES

GREAT CAUTION ADVISED FOR VESSELS IN ITS PATH

St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, Sept. 13.—(UP)—A hurricane of great intensity was passing over the Virgin Islands today. The storm began at midnight and had not abated several hours later.

No casualties have been reported.

New York, Sept. 13.—The French cable company said today it had information of a terrific hurricane raging in the West Indies, particularly in the vicinity of Guadeloupe, a French colony in the French West Indies. Communication with the section was still maintained, the company said.

Washington, Sept. 13.—A tropical hurricane was sweeping across the Virgin Islands today, centering at latitude 17 north and longitude 65 west at 10 A. M., the weather bureau was advised today.

It was described as a "dangerous storm" and great caution was advised for vessels near its path.

"Center of the disturbance will likely pass south of Mona Passage early tonight and near or slightly south of the city of Santo Domingo, Haiti, Friday morning," the bureau said.

It was not stated whether Porto Rico lies directly in the storm's path.

Homebrew Exhibit Explodes in Office of Fairmont Sheriff

Fairmont, Sept. 13.—(UP)—Sheriff Gust H. Jorgenson might be excused today if hereafter he placed confiscated home brew in one of those little red shanties reserved for dynamite and marked "Danger, Explosives!"

Yesterday, however, the sheriff knew not the power that lurked in a bottle of brew which made Milwaukee famous. He marched into his office with Wendell Wolford and five bottles of beer which had been confiscated in Wolford's home. Jorgenson placed the beer under his desk and sat down to write the record of the arrest.

Suddenly the beer began to explode and glass flew about like bits of shrapnel. One piece of glass made so deep a gash on Jorgenson's leg that the services of a doctor were required. The sheriff may be said now to be "moonshine shy."

2 HOLLYWOOD ROMANCES GO ON THE ROCKS

Los Angeles, Sept. 13.—(UP)—Two more Hollywood romances are about to end, divorce suits on file here today showed.

Foris May, whose marriage in 1921 to Donald MacDonald was hailed as "the happiest in film-dom" filed suit, charging cruelty.

William S. Gill compelled his wife, Miss Renee Adoree to drive home late at night and said "I hope you break your neck," she alleged. She charged desertion.

Miss Adoree refused to say whether there had been a reconciliation although she ordered her attorney to drop suit.

BLACKMER IS TRAILED BY ARMY OF DETECTIVES

MISSING WITNESS IN TEAPOT DOME CASE ENJOYS EXPERIENCE

U. S. AND FRENCH DETECTIVES ARE SEEKING TO EXTRADITE HIM

Paris, Sept. 13.—(UP)—Henry M. Blackmer, the missing witness in the Teapot Dome case in the United States, is trailed by an army of detectives and seems to enjoy the experience.

Every place the American oil man appears—and he is spending much time in Paris now—he is followed closely by United States and French detectives who seek to extradite him. Blackmer laughingly told friends he knew everyone of the detectives who had been assigned to trail him.

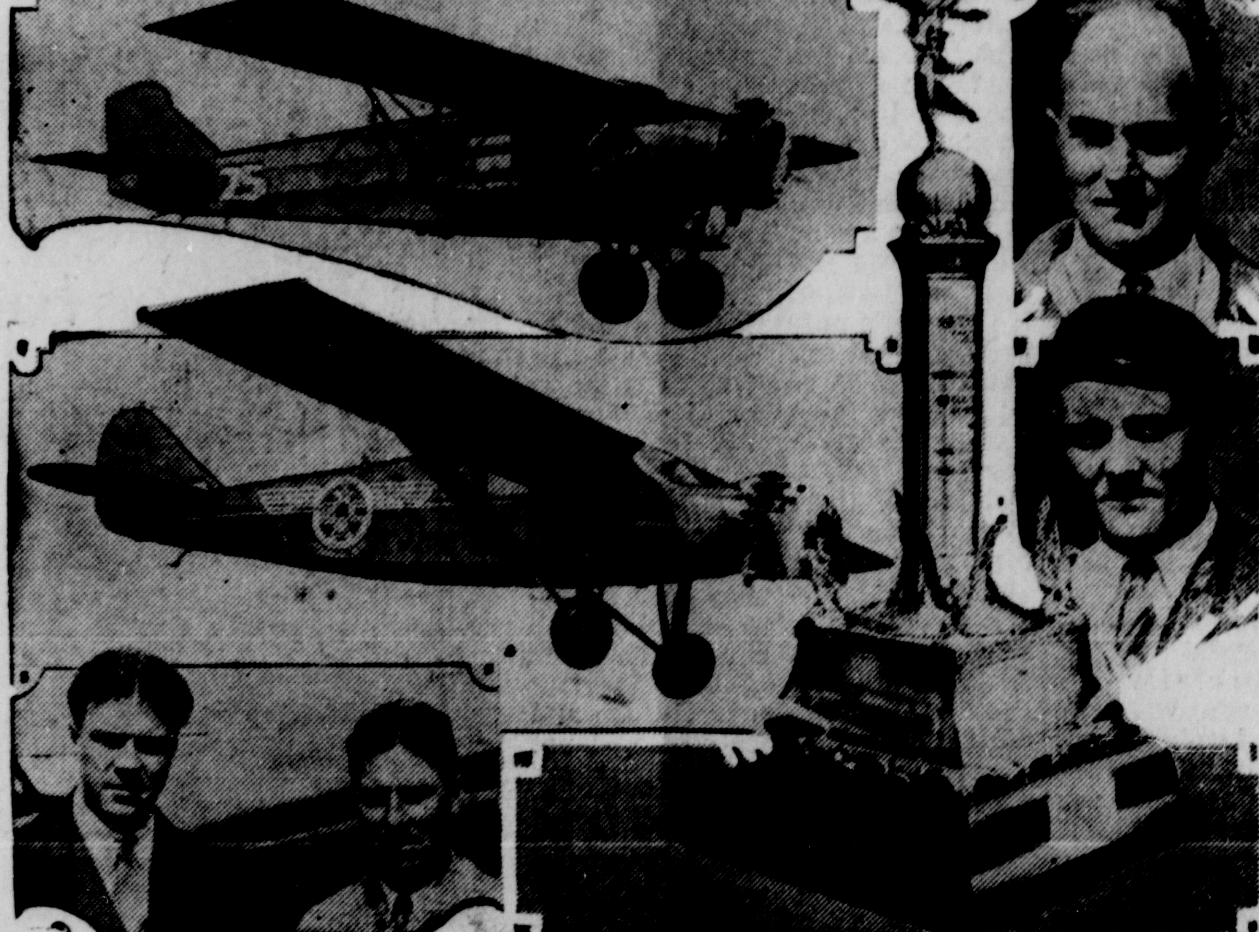

Meanwhile the matter of his extradition still is in abeyance as the French equivalent to a grand jury alone is capable of advising for or against his return to the United States and the ministry of justice must concur in this opinion.

Blackmer seems the least concerned of all involved in his extradition, desk and sat down to write the record of the arrest.

Suddenly the beer began to explode and glass flew about like bits of shrapnel. One piece of glass made so deep a gash on Jorgenson's leg that the services of a doctor were required. The sheriff may be said now to be "moonshine shy."

PIECE OF PLANE WING IDENTIFIED AS AMUNDSEN'S

Oslo, Norway, Sept. 13.—(UP)—A piece of an airplane wing identified as belonging to Roald Amundsen's Latham plane was found in the Tromsø channel today.

Its position was believed to indicate that Amundsen and his party were forced down soon after they left Tromsø last June to search for survivors from the dirigible Italia.

UPSHAW IS DEFEATED IN GEORGIA PRIMARY

CONG. LESLIE J. STEELE, SMITH SUPPORTER, IS RE-NOMINATED

HAS SIZEABLE MAJORITY OVER UPSHAW, DRY ANTI-SMITH DEMOCRAT

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 13.—Congressman Leslie J. Steele, supporter of Governor Alfred E. Smith, was re-nominated for congress from the fifth Georgia district by a sizeable majority over William D. Upshaw, famous dry and anti-Smith democrat, returns from yesterday's primary indicated today.

With many precincts outside of Atlanta missing, Steele had 11,537, and Upshaw 7,130. Upshaw appeared to have but two of the district's 18 county unit votes.

Governor L. G. Hardman was returned to office over State Senator E. D. Rivers, the returns indicated.

The Steele-Upshaw contest was the only one of national political significance in the state democratic primary. Upshaw had campaigned against Governor Smith, attacking the presidential candidate's prohibition stand and his Tammany associations.

NOTE OF CAUTION MARKS TRADING

PRICES IRREGULAR AT OPENING OF NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

By ELMER C. WALZER (United Press Financial Editor)

New York, Sept. 13.—A note of caution marked early trading on the stock market today. Prices were irregular at the opening and though regular at opening and the support was amply given on the decline in leaders, there was a perceptible falling off in volume of orders.

American bank notes, Standard Gas and New York Central were in demand for various individual reasons.

Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing also was in demand, rising nearly a point to 11. Rumors are in circulation that the Cullen-Fisher interests were planning a merger of this company and Baldwin Locomotive Works.

Amusements were depressed with the exception of Shubert which rose 3 1-8 to 71 1/4. U. S. Steel opened firm, but later lost 5-8 to 157 3-8. General Motors eased 1 1/2 to 204 1/4 and Radio lost 3 points to 204.

CONZET ASKS FOR MORE FIRE-FIGHTING EQUIPMENT IN WOODS

St. Paul, Sept. 13.—(UP)—The Minnesota reforestation commission today considered the appeal of Grover M. Conzet, state forester, for more fire-fighting equipment.

Conzet pointed out to the commission, which is drafting plans for forest policies, that fires now destroy more timber each year than the state can grow. The forester said 50 more observation towers were needed in addition to a larger force of men and a greater appropriation of available funds.

The commission has abandoned the plans for exchange of lands with private owners in order to get solid blocks of timber, because of the prohibitive cost and the involved legal obstacles.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK IN GENERAL IS AN ENCOURAGING ONE

SAYS IT IS NOT TRUE THAT CAMPAIGN YEAR IS A BAD BUSINESS YEAR

DECLARES THERE ARE SOME SPOTTY INDUSTRIES SUCH AS COAL AND TEXTILE

Washington, Sept. 13.—(UP)—Secretary of Treasury Mellon has reported to President Coolidge that the business situation in the United States is "very satisfactory."

Mellon said today he had advised the president that the general business outlook is "encouraging without boomings, and appears to be fundamentally sound."

"It is not true that a campaign year is a bad business year," Mellon said. "The country as a whole is prosperous, but there are still some spotty industries such as coal and textile."

"There is nothing unfavorable on the horizon to agriculture and the year 1928 should be a good one for farmers."

"Of course there are farmers who make money every year and others who never show a profit."

"As far as I can see into the future there is no sign of a business slump or depression. I cannot forecast the effect of the many economic laws of the world but at present there certainly is no sign of a business slump or depression. I cannot forecast the effect of the many economic laws of the world but at present there certainly is no cause for worry."

Washington, Sept. 13.—An optimistic report on the eastern political situation was given Herbert Hoover today by Sen. George Moses of New Hampshire, who has been in executive charge of organization work in that area.

He told Hoover New York could be confidently expected to cast its electoral vote for the republican ticket, and that the chief trouble now lies in Massachusetts.

Simultaneously, Secretary of Treasury Mellon said he would take an active part in Hoover's campaign.

Mellon said he would make at least three radio addresses on Hoover's behalf, and would probably address several meetings of business men. He said that the number of his addresses would be limited as "I will not make speeches unless I have something worth while to talk about."

Mellon said high money rates have not hurt prosperity but might do so if they continue indefinitely.

He said the coal industry now is recovering from its recent depression.

"Cost of production is being lowered and mine operators are producing better coal by elimination of slate and other unburnable waste," he explained, adding that the closing down of small mines operated uneconomically has also worked improvement in the industry.

Mellon refused to comment on Budget Director Lord's recent statement that the treasury would have a deficit this year instead of a surplus. He indicated, however, that the government's finances may be balanced next June as revenues are exceeding expectations.

Sen. Moses reported that democratic organizers were busier in Massachusetts than anywhere else in the east, and door-to-door canvasses were being conducted by them in most of the large cities of the state. "We are having more trouble in Massachusetts than in New York, the home state of the democratic nominee," Moses said. "We are, however, marking time in New York until after the state convention Sept. 29."

Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing also was in demand, rising nearly a point to 11. Rumors are in circulation that the Cutten-Fisher interests were planning a merger of this company and Baldwin Locomotive Works.

Amusements were depressed with the exception of Shubert which rose 3 1-8 to 7 1/4. U. S. Steel opened firm, but later lost 5-8 to 157 3-8. General Motors eased 1 1/2 to 204 1/4 and Radio lost 3 points to 204.

CONZET ASKS FOR MORE FIRE-FIGHTING EQUIPMENT IN WOODS

St. Paul, Sept. 13.—(UP)—The Minnesota reforestation commission today considered the appeal of Grover M. Conzet, state forester, for more fire-fighting equipment.

Conzet pointed out to the commission, which is drafting plans for forest policies, that fires now destroy more timber each year than the state can grow. The forester said 50 more observation towers were needed in addition to a larger force of men and a greater appropriation of available funds.

The commission has abandoned the plans for exchange of lands with private owners in order to get solid blocks of timber, because of the prohibitive cost and the involved legal obstacles.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK IN GENERAL IS AN ENCOURAGING ONE

SAYS IT IS NOT TRUE THAT CAMPAIGN YEAR IS A BAD BUSINESS YEAR

DECLARES THERE ARE SOME SPOTTY INDUSTRIES SUCH AS COAL AND TEXTILE

Washington, Sept. 13.—(UP)—Secretary of Treasury Mellon has reported to President Coolidge that the business situation in the United States is "very satisfactory."

Mellon said today he had advised the president that the general business outlook is "encouraging without boomings, and appears to be fundamentally sound."

"It is not true that a campaign year is a bad business year," Mellon said. "The country as a whole is prosperous, but there are still some spotty industries such as coal and textile."

"There is nothing unfavorable on the horizon to agriculture and the year 1928 should be a good one for farmers."

"Of course there are farmers who make money every year and others who never show a profit."

"As far as I can see into the future there is no sign of a business slump or depression. I cannot forecast the effect of the many economic laws of the world but at present there certainly is no sign of a business slump or depression. I cannot forecast the effect of the many economic laws of the world but at present there certainly is no cause for worry."

Washington, Sept. 13.—An optimistic report on the eastern political situation was given Herbert Hoover today by Sen. George Moses of New Hampshire, who has been in executive charge of organization work in that area.

He told Hoover New York could be confidently expected to cast its electoral vote for the republican ticket, and that the chief trouble now lies in Massachusetts.

Simultaneously, Secretary of Treasury Mellon said he would take an active part in Hoover's campaign.

Mellon said he would make at least three radio addresses on Hoover's behalf, and would probably address several meetings of business men. He said that the number of his addresses would be limited as "I will not make speeches unless I have something worth while to talk about."

Mellon said high money rates have not hurt prosperity but might do so if they continue indefinitely.

He said the coal industry now is recovering from its recent depression.

"Cost of production is being lowered and mine operators are producing better coal by elimination of slate and other unburnable waste," he explained, adding that the closing down of small mines operated uneconomically has also worked improvement in the industry.

Mellon refused to comment on Budget Director Lord's recent statement that the treasury would have a deficit this year instead of a surplus. He indicated, however, that the government's finances may be balanced next June as revenues are exceeding expectations.

Sen. Moses reported that democratic organizers were busier in Massachusetts than anywhere else in the east, and door-to-door canvasses were being conducted by them in most of the large cities of the state.

"We are having more trouble in Massachusetts than in New York, the home state of the democratic nominee," Moses said. "We are, however, marking time in New York until after the state convention Sept. 29."

Northern Serenaders Promote Third Dance of Season at U. C. T. Hall Tomorrow

The Northern Serenaders will give their third dance party of the season tomorrow evening, September 14, at the U. C. T. auditorium. The Serenaders together with the U. C. T. have outlined a program of novelty dances for the coming season to be held each Friday evening.

The personnel of the orchestra follows: Johnny Lundgren, trombone; Basil Lewis, reeds and violin; Eddie Olson, banjo; Joe Spoden, trumpet; Bob Werner, piano and songs; Otto Truhler, drums. Spoden, Werner and Truhler recently joined the band, being formerly of St. Paul.

CENSUS SHOWS INCREASE

Traffic Recorded on County Two Days is Six Per Cent Higher Than in 1927

The recent census of the county highways taken in Crow Wing county shows an increase of 6 percent of traffic over a similar census in 1927. This increase was recorded despite the fact that the census this year was taken on August 25 and 26 this year, two weeks after that of last year, which makes quite a difference in the amount of tourist traffic. Also the two days the census was taken this year were gloomy, rainy days while the year before the census was taken on days when weather conditions were ideal.

Avoid Bad Environment

Vol. 3 THURSDAY, SEPT. 13, 1928 No. 34

Published for the information and entertainment of the home-loving folks in Brainerd and vicinity by the Standard Lumber Co. Paul H. Schult, Editor.

More and more we're glad we're in the coal business here in Brainerd instead of trying to figure out a stand on prohibition and farm relief which will satisfy the whole bloomin' country. We feel sure that the best man will win just like the best coals are always in the lead. During the past few weeks we have had some splendid orders, especially on Standard Lump, Briquets and Sunshine Pocahontas. If you have not placed your order we suggest you do so very soon because the present indications are that summer prices will soon be withdrawn.

Mrs. Donson, who lives out on highway No. 2, is earnestly looking for someone who has run over and killed a rooster. Not that she has anything against roosters but she wants to win an argument with her husband who claims that no one ever did run over a rooster. He says it's only the hens that are foolish enough to let a car hit them because their feminine indecision causes them to start one way, turn around and get under the wheels. Mrs. Donson declares it takes three hens to get one rooster out of the road. What's your idea?

Bill: "Where did you get the black eye?"
Will: "You know that lady whose husband is in China?"

Bill: "Yes."
Will: "Well, he ain't."

Junior: "Father wouldn't commit murder, would he?"
Mother: "Why certainly not! Why do you ask?"
Junior: "Well, I just heard him down in the cellar saying, 'Let's kill the other one, John.'"

Getting rich is not always a sign of success. If you're paying all your bills you're doing pretty well.

An old house is neither an ornament nor an asset. You can have a new home by remodeling your old one and the cost will not be high either. Come in and talk it over some time. We'll be glad to get you in touch with reliable workmen.

Tentative Program for the Season of 1928-1929 Announced Today by City Club

SUPPORT NECESSARY

Arrangements Made to Secure Russian Cossack Chorus for Opening Program, October 7

The Brainerd Musical club program for the season 1928-1929 as announced today follows:

Oct.—Russian Cossack chorus.
Oct. or Nov.—Violinist-Farman.
Nov.—Social tea.
Dec.—Lester Spring, basso.
Jan.—Stell Anderson, pianist.
Feb.—Home talent program.
March—Clara Scheville, contralto.
April—Hartman string quartet.
April—Reader, not yet secured.

The opening program, October 7, will be one quite out of the ordinary. The Russian Cossack chorus consists of 13 members who have the reputation of doing wonderful ensemble work. The last Sunday concert will also be a special feature, presenting four artists who will give a varied program.

Two of the Saturday artists are making their second visit to Brainerd. Mr. Farman and Miss Anderson. Both of these artists thrilled their audiences on their first appearances to such a degree that a return engagement has been secured.

The program this year presents greater variety and greater attractions than perhaps ever before. The board feels that with such a program it should be easy to sell membership tickets. But if, in spite of offering such unusual attractions, the membership committee meets the old objection: "We can get all the music we want over the radio," it may seem as if such an organization as the Brainerd Musical club is no longer needed in Brainerd.

Although for 25 years this club has done more than any other single organization to establish Brainerd's reputation as a musical center, it may cease to exist unless the women rally to its support.

Mr. Kelly to Leave September 21 for San Diego to Report on Board U. S. S. Borie

G. L. Dickerhoff, chief torpedoman, U. S. N., formerly of Akron, Ohio, arrived in Brainerd Tuesday to take charge of the local Navy recruiting station as the relief of Chief Boatwain's Mate George Kelly.

Mr. Dickerhoff's last duty was on the Destroyer Wood on the Pacific coast. He has had 16 years naval service and during the war was a prisoner of war in Turkey for 17 months.

Mr. Kelly who has been stationed in Brainerd for the past two years, has been ordered to leave Friday, September 21 for San Diego, Calif., and report on board the U. S. S. Borie, a unit of the 38th destroyer division, part of the battle fleet. This particular division operates with the giant aircraft carriers Saratoga and Lexington and a cruise to Peru and Chile of four months duration is planned for next January to April.

During the past two years, recruiting results from the Brainerd area were very successful and Mr. Dickerhoff looks forward to a pleasant tour of duty in this territory.

Mr. Kelly was a member of the Brainerd Elks during his duty here. To keep in touch with his many

SAILORS GREAT CONSUMERS OF SOFT DRINKS

Naval Men Find That for One Thing Carbonated Drinks Act as Preventative of Seasickness

United States naval reports show that the bluejackets are large consumers of soft drinks and, according to J. F. Cibuzar, Brainerd Bottling Works, Brainerd, a fleet never starts on a long cruise without icing down enough carbonated drinks to supply a fair-sized city for months.

"The naval authorities are glad to encourage the men in their liking for these drinks," said Mr. Cibuzar, "for they recognize the healthful qualities of carbonated drinks as demonstrated by scientific tests. It has been proved, for instance, that even the dreaded typhoid bacillus is killed by carbon dioxide under pressure in a short time.

"Another thing, sailors find in some carbonated drinks a preventative of seasickness. This is especially true in the destroyer service, where the rolling of these short-beam vessels at high speed is so severe that it induces seasickness much more readily than the comparatively slight motion of the cruisers. You'll find practically every bluejacket on a destroyer keeps a dozen bottles of carbonated drinks in his locker for just this purpose.

"It is significant that not only on board naval vessels but in some leading hospitals, too, a pure, wholesome drink such as Brainerd Springs Beverages is considered almost a necessity."

Surprise Party at Lake Cottage

The A. M. Opsahl cottage was the scene of a pleasant surprise party last evening when the Lowell teachers of last year accompanied by Miss Alta Franklin, Miss Eula Michael, Miss Mable Olson, and Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Opsahl and daughter, June, motored out to the cottage to spend the evening with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Olson who are spending their honeymoon there. Games were played and a delicious lunch was served. The friends presented the newlyweds with a very nice picture with many happy wishes.

Mrs. Olson will be remembered as Miss Wava Hendrickson a former teacher in the Lowell school, who made many friends during her stay here, who also wish them many years of happiness. Mr. and Mrs. Olson were married last Sunday at Dodge Center, the home of the bride, and came here Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. Olson will make their home at Bloomington Prairie.

RAILWAYS CONFRONTED BY COMPETITION

CONFRONTED by competition of highway motors and airplanes, railroad passenger representatives are vigilant in developing modern methods of winning passengers back to the rails. E. E. Nelson, passenger traffic manager of the Northern Pacific, told members of the American Association of Railway Ticket Agents in convention at Seattle.

The speaker pointed out that passenger earnings of all of the Class 1 railroads had receded 24 per cent in 1927 as compared with 1920.

"When the managements of railroads are faced with a situation such as this and when figures for 1928 are showing similar declines with no immediate prospect of improvement, you can realize the seriousness of the situation," Mr. Nelson said. "The loss is largely in the local short-haul traffic."

Mr. Nelson drew attention to the fact that, at the end of 1927, more than 230,000 miles of paved and surfaced highway lay in the territory west of Chicago and St. Louis.

"A report of one of the largest, if not the largest bus-line operators in the United States, shows that the average distance their passengers were carried in 1927 was 27.5 miles," Mr. Nelson continued. "Comparing this with the average distance per passenger on the Northern Pacific of 142 miles, it readily can be seen that the short-haul business is traveling on the highways."

The speaker said that the big problem before passenger soliciting forces is the creation of business for steam railway trains, and he continued:

"Most of us at this gathering started in the railway business when the only competition of any consequence that we had was that of other railways. Now we have competition of hard roads, motor cars and even airplanes. There is a strong competition for the traveler's dollar, not only by means of transportation but from resorts both here and in foreign countries, not reached by the lines one represents, and it is to combat this that the railroads individually and as a whole have been advertising the resorts in this country by means of newspapers, magazines, booklets, lectures, moving pictures and in many other ways."

The Dispatch is glad to give prominence to these words of Mr. Nelson. He has done and is doing much for the lake region here. The railway is energetic in bringing to the notice of the world the advantages of this resort section and in routing travel here. Witness the conventions which came to the lake country this year, conventions of a national and international character, and many of whose delegates later traveled to Yellowstone Park and took other side trips.

Situated as Brainerd is, with the large railway repair shops here and the lake country adjacent, we are vitally interested in the success of the railway passenger carrying business.

ONE EYED AUTO

NEXT in danger to a drunken auto driver is a one eyed auto. For some simple reason one of the lights is out. It may be a broken connection. One of the wires has been jarred loose or it's broken bulb wire which a few cents will replace, or some simple thing that will take but a few minutes and a little brains to repair, but this is an age of speed, we'll wait 'till there's more time, and so it isn't done.

It is generally the right hand light, the very worst. An approaching car, perhaps on a narrow road, judges his turn out by the distance from the light and when too close to turn he discovers it and a collision is almost a certainty. Better no lights.

There is a law imposing a heavy fine for such an offense and it should be enforced. Every person owning or driving an auto should consider himself a committee of one to enter a complaint to the proper official, giving the name of the owner and the number of the license and then see that it is enforced. Whether the recent collision on the road near here was caused by that or not we do not say but as one had but one light, and he is not the only one, it looks rather suspicious.—Grygla Eagle.

"GO TO SCHOOL"

ONE of the easiest questions to answer is that which thousands of young people are asking themselves these days as the new school term nears, says the Little Falls Transcript. The question is: "Should I go back to school or go right out and earn some money and become self-made and successful?" The answer is: "Go to school!" There are hundreds of apparent exceptions to the rule that education is necessary to success. But most of these people have educated themselves. Nearly all of them will tell you that they took the hardest way.

If a chance to go to school is offered a young man or young woman these days, they should snatch at it, if for no other reason because it is "the easiest way." More often than not it is the most efficient and surest way, too.

A CLEAN-CUT YOUNG MAN

It must be said for Arthur E. Nelson that he has the hearty support of a large majority of the people where he is known and has served, says the Spring Valley Tribune. At Brown's Valley, where he was born and received his early education, he got all but two of the votes cast in the Republican primaries, and in St. Paul, where he completed his education, married, practiced law and served as city attorney and mayor, he outdistanced both of his two opponents by nearly 2,000 more than their combined votes.

Mr. Nelson is a clean-cut young man with the qualifications to make him an invaluable member of the U. S. Senate, and is free and outspoken so that there is never any question where he stands.

FROST HOLDS OFF

It is remarkable how frost is "holding off" in this lake country. Men with corn fields are anxious that perfect maturity be reached by their corn before frost comes. In the place of frost, however, we have a wet, misty day, one after the other, which does little to ripen corn.

Garden vegetation, grains and grasses have thrived. Potatoes are assured of good yields.

To get corn in the clear requires ten days of good warm weather, and no night frosts. The old adage that the farmer is a creature of the weather was never more exemplified than in this corn situation, where soil is right, planting was done properly and now the whole thing hinges on the kind of weather we get in the next few days.

To The Brainerd Dispatch:

I deem it highly important to the large number of sincere and fair-minded of your readers that your unfair, untruthful and scurrilous editorial of Tuesday, September 11, in which you attacked the record of Governor Smith, be answered.

You show either ignorance or deliberate untruthfulness in the statement that the New York Enforcement Act was repealed with the consent of Governor Smith. Any fairly well-informed editor should know that the repeal of the Act was submitted to the people of New York in accordance with the Constitutional provision and was carried by a majority of 1,164,586. And this, Mr. Editor, took place in a Republican State.

You make the statement that Governor Smith took oath as Governor of New York to enforce the laws of the United States. If you will consult any reliable reference, you will find that no Governor swears to enforce the laws of the United States but only the Constitution and that Governor Smith took the same oath as Governor Christianson of our State. Since the 18th Amendment is not self-executing, you should see that Governor Smith has never sworn to uphold any Federal prohibition law.

Your statement that the vicious element of the country is supporting Governor Smith's candidacy is not only an insult to those of your readers who are sincerely supporting Governor Smith because of his honesty and ability, but is so plainly opposed to facts as to seem ludicrous. Perhaps your paper can explain why Chicago, with a Republican Administration and a state enforcement act is rampant with bootlegging and crime; why Philadelphia, in the home state of Mr. Mellon, the whiskey-distiller who is the Republican

CONFRONTED by competition of highway motors and airplanes, railroad passenger representatives are vigilant in developing modern methods of winning passengers back to the rails. E. E. Nelson, passenger traffic manager of the Northern Pacific, told members of the American Association of Railway Ticket Agents in convention at Seattle.

The speaker pointed out that passenger earnings of all of the Class 1 railroads had receded 24 per cent in 1927 as compared with 1920.

"When the managements of railroads are faced with a situation such as this and when figures for 1928 are showing similar declines with no immediate prospect of improvement, you can realize the seriousness of the situation," Mr. Nelson said. "The loss is largely in the local short-haul traffic."

Mr. Nelson drew attention to the fact that, at the end of 1927, more than 230,000 miles of paved and surfaced highway lay in the territory west of Chicago and St. Louis.

"A report of one of the largest, if not the largest bus-line operators in the United States, shows that the average distance their passengers were carried in 1927 was 27.5 miles," Mr. Nelson continued. "Comparing this with the average distance per passenger on the Northern Pacific of 142 miles, it readily can be seen that the short-haul business is traveling on the highways."

The speaker said that the big problem before passenger soliciting forces is the creation of business for steam railway trains, and he continued:

"Most of us at this gathering started in the railway business when the only competition of any consequence that we had was that of other railways. Now we have competition of hard roads, motor cars and even airplanes. There is a strong competition for the traveler's dollar, not only by means of transportation but from resorts both here and in foreign countries, not reached by the lines one represents, and it is to combat this that the railroads individually and as a whole have been advertising the resorts in this country by means of newspapers, magazines, booklets, lectures, moving pictures and in many other ways."

The Dispatch is glad to give prominence to these words of Mr. Nelson. He has done and is doing much for the lake region here. The railway is energetic in bringing to the notice of the world the advantages of this resort section and in routing travel here. Witness the conventions which came to the lake country this year, conventions of a national and international character, and many of whose delegates later traveled to Yellowstone Park and took other side trips.

Situated as Brainerd is, with the large railway repair shops here and the lake country adjacent, we are vitally interested in the success of the railway passenger carrying business.

ONE EYED AUTO

NEXT in danger to a drunken auto driver is a one eyed auto. For some simple reason one of the lights is out. It may be a broken connection. One of the wires has been jarred loose or it's broken bulb wire which a few cents will replace, or some simple thing that will take but a few minutes and a little brains to repair, but this is an age of speed, we'll wait 'till there's more time, and so it isn't done.

It is generally the right hand light, the very worst. An approaching car, perhaps on a narrow road, judges his turn out by the distance from the light and when too close to turn he discovers it and a collision is almost a certainty. Better no lights.

There is a law imposing a heavy fine for such an offense and it should be enforced. Every person owning or driving an auto should consider himself a committee of one to enter a complaint to the proper official, giving the name of the owner and the number of the license and then see that it is enforced. Whether the recent collision on the road near here was caused by that or not we do not say but as one had but one light, and he is not the only one, it looks rather suspicious.—Grylla Eagle.

"GO TO SCHOOL"

ONE of the easiest questions to answer is that which thousands of young people are asking themselves these days as the new school term nears, says the Little Falls Transcript. The question is: "Should I go back to school or go right out and earn some money and become self-made and successful?" The answer is: "Go to school!" There are hundreds of apparent exceptions to the rule that education is necessary to success. But most of these people have educated themselves. Nearly all of them will tell you that they took the hardest way.

If a chance to go to school is offered a young man or young woman these days, they should snatch at it, if for no other reason because it is "the easiest way." More often than not it is the most efficient and surest way, too.

A CLEAN-CUT YOUNG MAN

It must be said for Arthur E. Nelson that he has the hearty support of a large majority of the people where he is known and has served, says the Spring Valley Tribune. At Brown's Valley, where he was born and received his early education, he got all but two of the votes cast in the Republican primaries, and in St. Paul, where he completed his education, married, practiced law and served as city attorney and mayor, he outdistanced both of his two opponents by nearly 2,000 more than their combined votes.

Mr. Nelson is a clean-cut young man with the qualifications to make him an invaluable member of the U. S. Senate, and is free and outspoken so that there is never any question where he stands.

FROST HOLDS OFF

It is remarkable how frost is "holding off" in this lake country. Men with corn fields are anxious that perfect maturity be reached by their corn before frost comes. In the place of frost, however, we have a wet, misty day, one after the other, which does little to ripen corn.

Garden vegetation, grains and grasses have thrived. Potatoes are assured of good yields.

To get corn in the clear requires ten days of good warm weather, and no night frosts. The old adage that the farmer is a creature of the weather was never more exemplified than in this corn situation, where soil is right, planting was done properly and now the whole thing hinges on the kind of weather we get in the next few days.

HOMER DECIDES GAME THIRD TIME IN CRUCIAL SERIES

YANKEES AND ATHLETIC TILTS ARE REVIEWED

YESTERDAY IT WAS MAX BISHOP OF ATHLETICS WHO HAMMERED OUT HOME RUN

SUNDAY MEUSEL OFFICIATED, AND TUESDAY BABE RUTH SLAMMED ONE OUT

New York, Sept. 13. (UP)—For the third time in the crucial four-game series between the New York Yankees and the Philadelphia Athletics a home run has decided the game.

Yesterday it was Max Bishop, the squatly second baseman of the Athletics, who drove out the run that decided the final battle and gave the Athletics one of the four games.

On Sunday Bob Meusel, Yankee outfielder, smote the home run that decided the game and Tuesday Babe Ruth slammed out his forty-ninth of the season to give the Yankees their third straight victory.

Today the A's are one and one-half games behind the Yankees, a bad let-down from the half game lead that Connie Mack's men held when they blew into the Yankee Stadium Sunday.

The loss of three games does not mean that Philadelphia is out of the pennant chase, for Mack's team has been traveling at a 750 clip lately and is well-nigh invincible against any team in the league except the Yankees. If Miller Huggins' club cannot improve on the road, it is likely to find itself wallowing in second place.

ENTERS SEMI-FINAL ROUND OF NATIONAL AMATEUR GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

PERKINS LEADS DAWSON OF CHICAGO 1 UP AT END OF FIRST 18 HOLES
By FRANK GETTY
(United Press Sports Editor)

Braeburn Country Club, West Newton, Mass., Sept. 13. — (UP)—Bobby Jones, playing as a champion should, overwhelmed his third-round opponent, John D. Beck of Great Britain today, 14 and 13 to play, and entered the semi-final round of the national amateur golf championship.

Braeburn Country Club, West Newton, Mass., Sept. 13. — Bobby Jones came into his own today, smashing the course record at Braeburn and amassing a lead of 12 up over his opponent, John D. Beck, of Great Britain, at the end of the first 18 holes of their quarter-final match.

The amateur champion emerged from his slump and shot a brilliant 70, the best that has been turned in during the national championship. Beck offered little opposition, taking 85, but this did not matter to Bobby, who was his own deadly self today.

In the three other matches, George Voght led Dr. O. F. Willing, 3 up, at the end of the morning round. Philip Finlay, and T. Philip Perkins, British amateur champion, was 1 up on fighting Johnny Dawson, of Chicago.

The golf of the morning rounds was for the most part of high order, with Perkins turning in a par 72 and Dawson 73.

FRIENDS ARE TRYING TO PERSUADE HIM TO RECONSIDER HIS RETIREMENT FROM CHAMPIONSHIP PLAY

WNN AWWA

IN THE MIDST OF ALL THE EXCITEMENT ABOUT "BIG BILL" TILDEN'S AMATEUR STANDING IT IS RECALLED THAT "LITTLE BILL" ALWAYS TURNED A DEAF EAR TO ANY OFFERS TO WRITE THE GAME FOR THE PAPERS.

By QUIN HALL.
WHETHER it's perfectly proper for an amateur tennis player to write pieces for the papers is an argument in which we have no craving to meddle.

The U. S. L. T. A., the governing tennis body here, recently decided that it would be necessary to spank Big Bill Tilden a little for doing just that. Big Bill seemingly overstepped the boundary and did the unethical thing by writing about some little tennis affair over at Wimbledon, in Merrie Old England, earlier in the year and was set down—as they say on the track—for an indefinite period.

The setting down process may have been the sporting thing to do and on the other hand the governing body may have been all wet. Take your own choice. Every man for his own opinion.

But in all of the furor of publicity which preceded the meeting of the board, the length of the meeting, which lasted away past bedtime and into the hours when only milkmen are supposed to be on the streets, and following the decision which went against the noted racket wielder, the amateur attitude of certain other tennis players was recalled.

There is the remark credited to Jean Borotra, a brilliant player and one of the most lovable characters on the courts. Jean, as you know, is of the French Davis Cup team. While touring around the world the argument about amateurism and professionalism arose in Sydney, Australia, during Borotra's stay there. "I have nothing against professional tennis," he is reported as saying, "but for me—I would not enjoy the game were I a professional. It is a game, and I think it is stupid to make a business of a game."

This may be away from the subject of writing and amateur standing, but it shows the French star's amateur attitude. Borotra sells pumps. Tennis is a diversion, and he enjoys playing.

Closer to the point is the case of Little Bill Johnston, the amateur from California, also a Wimbledon winner. Bill recently retired, but he's retired before and each time he has been persuaded again to go to the wars.

Little Bill Johnston is still a brilliant player and if he clings to his decision to retire definitely, his passing from championship play will be another blow to amateur tennis in the United States.

Johnston, who has a family, could have used the extra money, but he valued an unquestionable amateur standing above the extra financial reward which he could have gathered.

Little Bill kept everything he did on the courts up to that standard—and it was a high one. He played for the sheer love of the game and never had a nickel's worth of financial interest in it.

One reason given for Little Bill's latest retirement is the fact that in recent years he has been unsuccessful in long championship matches. Deuce games and deuce sets are not to his liking and when Tilden found this out Big Bill always planned to stretch his matches with Little Bill out too far for the nervous Californian.

It has been suggested by some followers of the game that championship matches be shortened and that deuce sets be eliminated, but such sets are usually thrilling from a spectator standpoint and it is doubtful if they will be abolished in match play, despite the fact they are tiring to players who are advancing in years.

Little Bill Johnston is still a brilliant player and if he clings to his decision to retire definitely, his passing from championship play will be another blow to amateur tennis in the United States.

HOMER DECIDES GAME THIRD TIME IN CRUCIAL SERIES

YANKEES AND ATHLETIC TILTS ARE REVIEWED

YESTERDAY IT WAS MAX BISHOP OF ATHLETICS WHO HAMMERED OUT HOME RUN

SUNDAY MEUSEL OFFICIATED, AND TUESDAY BABE RUTH SLAMMED ONE OUT

New York, Sept. 13.—(UP)—For the third time in the crucial four-game series between the New York Yankees and the Philadelphia Athletics a home run has decided the game.

Yesterday it was Max Bishop, the squatly second baseman of the Athletics, who drove out the run that decided the final battle and gave the Athletics one of the four games.

On Sunday Bob Meusel, Yankee outfielder, smote the home run that decided the game and Tuesday Babe Ruth slammed out his forty-ninth of the season to give the Yankees their third straight victory.

Today the A's are one and one-half games behind the Yankees, a bad let-down from the half game lead that Connie Mack's men held when they blew into the Yankee Stadium Sunday.

The loss of three games does not mean that Philadelphia is out of the pennant chase, for Mack's team has been traveling at a .750 clip lately and is well-nigh invincible against any team in the league except the Yankees. If Miller Huggins' club cannot improve on the road, it is likely to find itself wallowing in second place.

Braeburn Country Club, West Newton, Mass., Sept. 13.—Bobby Jones came into his own today, smashing the course record at Braeburn and amassing a lead of 12 up, over his opponent, John D. Beck, of Great Britain, at the end of the first 18 holes of their quarter-final match.

The amateur champion emerged from his slump and shot a brilliant 70, the best that has been turned in during the national championship. Beck offered little opposition, taking 85, but this did not matter to Bobby, who was his own deadly self today.

In the three other matches, George Voight led Dr. O. F. Willing, 3 up, at the end of the morning round; Harrison R. Johnston, was 1 up on Philip Finlay, and T. Philip Perkins, British amateur champion, was 1 up on fighting Johnny Dawson, of Chicago.

The golf of the morning rounds was for the most part of high order, with Perkins turning in a par 72 and Dawson 73.

Bill recently retired, but he's retired before and each time he has been persuaded again to go to the wars. Little Bill has had offers for a series of brief articles on the game, but always he has turned down such propositions. Without criticizing anybody, Johnston always has been against layers writing the game. In his case he just couldn't do it. It was merely his personal attitude concerning what he figured was right. Undoubtedly

Johnston, who has a family, could have used the extra money, but he valued an unquestionable amateur standing above the extra financial reward which he could have gathered.

Little Bill kept everything he did on the courts up to that standard—and it was a high one. He played for the sheer love of the game and never had a nickel's worth of financial interest in it.

CARL ZAPFFE TELLS TOUR EXPERIENCES

Returned Recently From Continent
Wide Tour on Lincoln Highway
Safety Expedition

REVEALS SCENIC WONDERS

Was One of the Four Boy Scouts
Throughout Country Picked for Safety Advancement

The following is an account written by Carl Zapffe, Jr., Brainerd, one of a group of four Boy Scouts picked from throughout the country to accompany the Lincoln Highway safety tour from New York City to San Francisco:

After four days of training at Camp Sliwanoy, New York, and after certain outfitting for the trip, we left the Holland Tunnels, New York City, July 6, at 9:47 A. M. Our means of travel was a Reo Speedwagon with the back staved and covered with heavy canvas like the old Pioneer's Covered Wagon. We chose this because we were pioneers in demonstrating from Coast to Coast Highway Safety and Scouting for boys.

East of the Mississippi the country is flat and uninteresting, and the only points of interest seen were state capitols, Independence Hall, Betsy Ross' house and Coney Island, where we enjoyed ourselves the whole afternoon on a fifteen-foot roll of free tickets apiece and a promise of more, if needed. Baron Colliers, the great advertising man whom we met, was responsible for that. But the feature of our trip going west was not scenery as much as it was the people we met and our receptions in the towns and cities along the way. We gave sixty-five land demonstrations and ten or twelve life-saving demonstrations. Many times we met Boy Scout bands a mile or so out on the road, who would slowly parade us into town. At each stop we underwent the customary quizzing and photographing of a swarm of newspaper reporters, met the mayor and other high officials in the city at the time, went to the town square or to theatres and gave our demonstration. We made from one to seven stops a day.

Our demonstration began with Mr. Lombardi, the director of demonstrations, telling about the trip, etc., then introducing us four Scouts and turning the rest over to us. I had the speaking part along with a couple of other things, so I explained the fire by friction, fire by flint and steel, signalling in Morse and semaphore, etc., while we demonstrated it. Then we showed first aid, the highway signal code, the fireman's lift, fireman's drag, artificial respiration, and out west we added first aid to snake-bite. Our life-saving demonstration was a presentation of Junior Red Cross life-saving. All this was a showing of the elementary things in safety and Scouting, things that anyone can do. Our purpose was to teach and not to entertain.

Snow Capped Mountains

As to the scenic part of our trip, there is much to say. Coming into Cheyenne, Wyo., the morning of July 26, we saw our first snow-capped mountains towering in the distance. Here we were in time to see Cheyenne's great rodeo, and it certainly was exciting. Mabel Strickland roped a running steer from her horse so that it was flung over twice in mid-air, then fell on the ground and broke its spine. In the broncho-busting, one cowboy had the whole side of his head crushed by the horse's hoof, yet was not killed, while many minor injuries were inflicted. The ambulance was on the field half the time. Then there was trick-riding and Ken Maynard was on the field acting for a new movie of his. It was one of the most interesting things I have ever seen, and we were there during two days of it. We stayed in the barracks of Fort D. A. Russell, Batteries B and C of Post 76, and there we had a taste of real army life.

The Lincoln Highway, which we followed on our 'out' trip, was built for good driving, and therefore not very scenic. We didn't see many mountains until our return trip. In the center of Utah, after we had been riding through hundreds of miles of desert-land, we suddenly entered a beautifully forested and mountainous area. After half an hour's climbing in this, we just as suddenly rounded a curve on a tremendously high cliff and saw, spread far below us, a silvery misted panorama, sparkling in the clear sunlight, of beautiful Salt Lake City with Great Salt Lake, an irregular splotch of blue, in the distant background.

Swim in Salt Lake
Of course, the trip would be a failure if we didn't swim in Great Salt Lake, so, after the wonderful reception for us there, we went out to the great Saltair Pavilion, built over the lake, and had a swim. When the gatekeepers heard who we were they let us through free of charge. One has to swim in this lake to appreciate the peculiar sensation. The other fellows dove in off the steps, and besides receiving a smart crack on their heads from the heavy water, they had their eyes, nose and mouth burnt out from the 22 per cent salt. Every part of you touching the water is buoyed up by the most peculiar and persistent force. It is practically impossible to swim under water, and in any position you can float on top without the usual worry of keeping your nose above. On coming out you take a fresh water shower, as you are actually covered with salt crystals. Then we heard the largest organ in the world play in the Mormon Tabernacle. The Mormon men are huge, all standing about six and a half feet tall and fine physical specimens. We enjoyed our stay in the Mormon country a great deal, and in spite of criticism to the contrary, they have done a wonderful work there.

Forty miles west of Salt Lake City we came to one of the most astounding sights I have ever seen. Our road ran right through an actual desert of salt! As far as the eye could see there stretched the most glaring field of perfectly white and pure salt and to a depth of four or five feet. Past this we came to a break in the Lincoln Highway, and an old desert-dried hermit directed us to go to the left corner of a barn and head south. We did, and from there on for thirty miles we picked our way over a smooth alkaline desert. We had to dodge occasional sage-brush and keep in sight of a few other car tracks, but otherwise we were alone on a monster pavement stretched between the four horizons. Past this we came to rocky country and had the luck to find two pairs of ram's horns lying on the hillside. That night we slept out on the desert under a cold, clear moon and near a little supply store that was on the map as Ithapah.

In Ely, Nevada, we saw an enormous copper pit, supposed to be the largest man-made hole in the world, but I staked our Hibbing iron ore pit against it and won.

In Sacramento we saw the famous Fort Sutter collection of historic California, had dinner with a group of officials, met in our honor, and then left for Oakland. Here we saw the largest airport in the world, and a man there said he would take us up in a beautiful passenger plane if he could find us in Los Angeles, but our paths never crossed again.

At Lincoln Park in sight of the Golden Gate, we held our final ceremonies, our trip completed at twenty-four minutes past three that Wednesday afternoon of August 8. It was a wonderful reception, bands having paraded us, an escort of motorcycle police bringing us past signs etc., meeting the mayor and other officials, photographed by kodaks and movie cameras, and presented with flags, neckerchiefs, and other awards by the "Native Sons" as they call themselves. It took every bit of the warmth of the excitement, though, to keep us from freezing, as one of the most raw and penetrating fogs of our experiences had settled over the whole of the territory around San Francisco.

That night we were taken by a Chinese scout through the weirdly beautiful and impressive Chinatown in San Francisco. It is about the size of Brainerd and is one of the neatest and most unique places that I have ever been in. We had supper there and the waiters couldn't even speak English. And what a supper it was!—fried bamboo shoots, a nut relish and rice which was to be eaten with chopsticks! It took us an hour to eat all we wanted and at that a little was very filling. We left the next morning for Yosemite National Park. Here we saw the deer and bears running wild, climbed a cliff, saw the "Firefall" (the coals of a huge bonfire which are slowly pushed from an overhanging rock on the summit of an immense cliff near the lodge at 9 p. m. every night) and then slept in the open under the starlit pines.

From New York to San Francisco we in the covered wagon hadn't had even a flat tire. We were accustomed to resting over on Sundays, but this Sunday we planned going ahead to Los Angeles. When we came out of the hotel in Bakersfield we found a flat tire, and later on in the day we cracked all the cylinder heads and blew out the gasket which meant $200.00 in repairs and an abandonment of the covered wagon. So we rode in the Hudson touring car on our return trip. Both of these cars were loaned to us by the Hudson and Reo Companies in Lansing, Mich.

In Los Angeles we stayed in the Ambassador hotel, one of America's most beautiful hotels, having a golf links, swimming pool, tennis court, etc., on its grounds and a complete store system on the ground floor. We saw quite a few movie stars here. Monday we dined with the famous African hunter and explorer, Major Burnham, met "Doug" Fairbanks and saw his big studio, saw two movies being taken, and Mr. Mills, our manager, and I spoke over KFWB. That night we saw the "Pilgrimage Play," an outdoor pageant of Christ and supposed to be better than Europe's "Oberammergau."

Tuesday we swam in the surf at Santa Monica and had the time of our life. That night we listened to a symphony from Brussels play in the famed Hollywood Bowl.

We left Los Angeles Wednesday and our trip from there took us by an entirely different and more southern route than that come out on. We passed through 19 miles of Arizona and within 32 miles of Death Valley. Even at that distance it was so hot and arid that we had to pay 25 cents for a gallon of water. That's more than is paid for gasoline here.

In Utah we went through Zion National Park, and here we were engaged in a very interesting half hour with our first rattlesnake. It was a vicious thing, but Mark and Berry finally proved themselves victors and clipped the six rattles from its tail. Then we went to Cedar Breaks which, aeons and aeons ago, had been heaved to an altitude of 10,400 feet.

Slept in Open

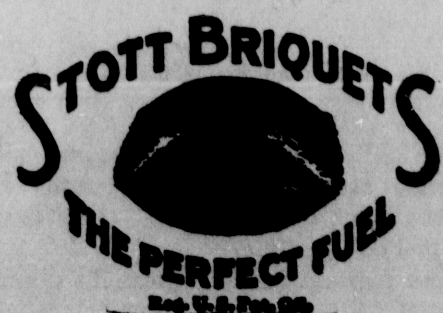

There we slept in the open on half ploughed ground with the thermometer at about 34. Both these parks are beautiful, Zion composed of gigantic red and white cliffs, and Cedar Breaks a forest reserve with an immense washaway to the depth of 1,000 feet in its center. This washaway exposes the peculiar strata in these parts. It is a greatly varied and brilliantly colored clay and limestone stratification, composed of the most glaring of oranges, whites, reds and purples and which makes a most magnificent sight.

The most beautiful sight seen on our trip, though, was Bryce canyon, computed to be prettier this year than Grand canyon. It is of the same construction as Cedar Breaks, but is even more extravagantly colored, and instead of being merely a washout, it is clustered with beautifully stratified clay pinnacles. These are so eroded as to excite the dullest of imaginations into personifying them. Many groups are officially named, such as Lincoln, Washington, the Happy Family, Queen Elizabeth, etc., all of which look surprisingly natural. The canyon is 17 miles around and is a network of beautifully scenic trails.

Every minute of our return trip was crowded with interest, the details of which would be endless. Our last and crowning experience was to conquer Pike's Peak via the famous Auto Highway which climbs to the very summit and makes one of the most unique of drives in an automobile. It is very cold up there at 14,109 feet altitude, in great contrast to the heat of Colorado Springs lying at its base, and you pant from no exertion at all because of the rarity of the air.

On our way down we stopped at a soda spring. This water tastes strongly of soda and is very healthful but not at all pleasant to the taste. From there we visited the Garden of the Gods, a park of unusual red limestone formations. We also visited the Royal Gorge and saw Skyline drive. At Royal Gorge we bought some torpedoes and firecrackers, threw them into the canyon, and heard them echoing and reechoing between the cliffs till it again lapsed into silence. The Gorge is 3,000 feet deep at this point and sheer cliff.

In Illinois we visited the Lincoln memorial near Springfield and at Joliet saw the huge state prison. We left Mark Hughes at his home in Joliet, then drove to Chicago where I left my two companions, the driver, and our manager. It had all been such a wonderful experience and my three companions were such fine fellows that I really didn't know whether I wanted to return home or stay with the others for the rest of the trip.

Already the trip has faded into what I regard as a wonderful dream; yet, its characteristics and impressions are so vivid and so variegated that I shall never forget them, as I would a dream. And on recollection now I am learning every day to appreciate more and more the true immensity of our United States of America, but equal to this conception comes the realization of the vast power and unlimited resources of Scouting that can send three boys to South Africa with the Martin Johnson's, one to the Antarctic with Byrd, four on a trip across the United States, and the many other smaller things it is doing for $60,000 boys in the United States and for the countless numbers of the new generation in the 53 countries where Scouting exists.

New York, Sept. 13. — (UP) — Gangsters invaded a hospital today to rescue two of their members, who were held in the prison ward, killed a patrolman but were repelled by nurses and internes and fled without rescuing the two prisoners.

In was the most daring underworld move since the present gang war started in New York.

All of the gangsters were heavily armed, carrying either pistols or sawed-off shot guns, and fired numerous shots as they rushed through the doors of the Fordham hospital.

One of the prisoners was James Ward, who broke his leg recently while attempting to escape from police who had surprised burglars.

Patrolman J. C. Bronson, assigned to guard the injured prisoners early this morning was talking with an orderly when a group of men, all armed, entered and disappeared down a corridor. The gangsters advanced on the prison ward and started firing. Bronson, a veteran of 22 years on the force, fell dead at the first volley.

Internes and nurses ran to the prison ward and prevented the gangsters from gaining entrance. Meanwhile police were called and just before the first squad arrived the gangsters disappeared.

CARL ZAPFFE TELLS TOUR EXPERIENCES

Returned Recently From Continent
Wide Tour on Lincoln Highway
Safety Expedition

REVEALS SCENIC WONDERS

Was One of the Four Boy Scouts
Throughout Country Picked for
Safety Advancement

The following is an account written by Carl Zapffe, Jr., Brainerd, one of a group of four Boy Scouts picked from throughout the country to accompany the Lincoln Highway safety tour from New York City to San Francisco:

After four days of training at Camp Siwanoy, New York, and after certain outfitting for the trip, we left the Holland Tunnels, New York City, July 6, at 9:47 A. M. Our means of travel was a Reo Speedwagon with the back staved and covered with heavy canvas like the old Pioneer's Covered Wagon. We chose this because we were pioneers in demonstrating from Coast to Coast Highway Safety and Scouting for boys.

East of the Mississippi the country is flat and uninteresting, and the only points of interest seen were state capitols, Independence Hall, Betsy Ross' house and Coney Island, where we enjoyed ourselves the whole afternoon on a fifteen-foot roll of free tickets apiece and a promise of more, if needed. Baron Colliers, the great advertising man whom we met, was responsible for that. But the feature of our trip going west was not scenery as much as it was the people we met and our receptions in the towns and cities along the way. We gave sixty-five land demonstrations and ten or twelve life-saving demonstrations. Many times we met Boy Scout bands a mile or so out on the road, who would slowly parade us into town. At each stop we underwent the customary quizzing and photographing of a swarm of newspaper reporters, met the mayor and other high officials in the city at the time, went to the town square or to theatres and gave our demonstration. We made from one to seven stops a day.

Our demonstration began with Mr. Lombardi, the director of demonstrations, telling about the trip, etc., then introducing us four Scouts and turning the rest over to us. I had the speaking part along with a couple other things, so I explained the fire by friction, fire by flint and steel, signalling in Morse and semaphore, etc., while we demonstrated it. Then we showed first aid, the highway signal code, the fireman's lift, fireman's drag, artificial respiration, and out west we added first aid to snake-bite. Our life-saving demonstration was a presentation of Junior Red Cross life-saving. All this was a showing of the elementary things in safety and Scouting, things that anyone can do. Our purpose was to teach and not to entertain.

Snow Capped Mountains

As to the scenic part of our trip, there is much to say. Coming into Cheyenne, Wyo., the morning of July 26, we saw our first snow-capped mountains towering in the distance. Here we were in time to see Cheyenne's great rodeo, and it certainly was exciting. Mabel Strickland roped a running steer from her horse so that it was flung over twice in mid-air, then fell on the ground and broke its spine. In the broncho-busting, one cowboy had the whole side of his head crushed by the horse's hoof, yet was not killed, while many minor injuries were inflicted. The ambulance was on the field half the time. Then there was trick-riding and Ken Maynard was on the field acting for a new movie of his. It was one of the most interesting things I have ever seen, and we were there during two days of it. We stayed in the barracks of Fort D. A. Russell, Batteries B and C of Post 76, and there we had a taste of real army life.

The Lincoln Highway, which we followed on our 'out' trip, was built for good driving, and therefore not very scenic. We didn't see many mountains until our return trip. In the center of Utah, where we had been riding through hundreds of miles of desert-land, we suddenly entered a beautifully forested and mountainous area. After half an hour's climbing in this, we just as suddenly rounded a curve on a tremendously high cliff and saw, spread far below us, a silvery misted panorama, sparkling in the clear sunlight, of beautiful Salt Lake City with Great Salt Lake, an irregular splotch of blue, in the distant background.

Swim in Salt Lake

Of course, the trip would be a failure if we didn't swim in Great Salt Lake, so, after the wonderful reception for us there, we went out to the great Saltair Pavilion, built over the lake, and had a swim. When the gatekeepers heard who we were they let us through free of charge. One has to swim in this lake to appreciate the peculiar sensation. The other fellows dove in off the steps, and besides receiving a smart crack on their heads from the heavy water, they had their eyes, nose and mouth burnt out from the 22 per cent salt. Every part of you touching the water is buoyed up by the most peculiar and persistent force. It is practically impossible to swim under water, and in any position you can float on top without the usual worry of keeping your nose above. On coming out you take a fresh water shower, as you are actually covered with salt crystals. Then we heard the largest organ in the world play in the Mormon Tabernacle. The Mormon men are huge, all standing about six and a half feet tall and fine physical specimens. We enjoyed our stay in the Mormon country a great deal, and in spite of criticism to the contrary, they have done a wonderful work there.

Forty miles west of Salt Lake City we came to one of the most astounding sights I have ever seen. Our road ran right through an actual desert of salt! As far as the eye could see there stretched the most glaring field of perfectly white and pure salt and to a depth of four or five feet. Past this we came to a break in the Lincoln Highway, and an old desert-dried hermit directed us to go to the left corner of a barn and head south. We did, and from there on for thirty miles we picked our way over a smooth alkaline desert. We had to dodge occasional sage-brush and keep in sight of a few other car tracks, but otherwise we were alone on a monster pavement stretched between the four horizons. Past this we came to rocky country and had the luck to find two pairs of ram's horns lying on the hillside. That night we slept out on the desert under a cold, clear moon and near a little supply store that was on the map as Ithapah.

In Ely, Nevada, we saw an enormous copper pit, supposed to be the largest man-made hole in the world, but I staked our Hibbing iron ore pit against it and won.

In Sacramento we saw the famous Port Sutter collection of historic California, had dinner with a group of officials, met in our honor, and then left for Oakland. Here we saw the largest airport in the world, and a man there said he would take us up in a beautiful passenger plane if he could find us in Los Angeles, but our path never crossed again.

At Lincoln Park in sight of the Golden Gate, we held our final ceremonies, our trip completed at twenty-four minutes past three that Wednesday afternoon of August 8. It was a wonderful reception, bands having paraded us, an escort of motorcycle police bringing us past stop signs etc., meeting the mayor and other officials, photographed by kodaks and movie cameras, and presented with flags, neckerchiefs, and other awards by the "Native Sons" as they call themselves. It took every bit of the warmth of the excitement, though, to keep us from freezing, as one of the most raw and penetrating fogs of our experiences had settled over the whole of the territory around San Francisco.

That night we were taken by a Chinese scout through the weirdly beautiful and impressive Chinatown in San Francisco. It is about the size of Brainerd and is one of the neatest and most unique places that I have ever been in. We had supper there and the waiters couldn't even speak English. And what a supper it was!—tried bamboo shoots, a nut relish and rice which was to be eaten with chopsticks! It took us an hour to eat all we wanted and at that a little was very filling. We left the next morning for Yosemite National Park. Here we saw the deer and bears running wild, climbed a cliff, saw the "Firefall" (the coals of a huge bonfire which are slowly pushed from an overhanging rock on the summit of an immense cliff near the lodge at 9 p. m. every night) and then slept in the open under the starlit pines.

From New York to San Francisco we in the covered wagon hadn't had even a flat tire. We were accustomed to resting over on Sundays, but this Sunday we planned going ahead to Los Angeles. When we came out of the hotel in Bakersfield we found a flat tire, and later on in the day we cracked all the cylinder heads and blew out the gasket which meant $200.00 in repairs and an abandonment of the covered wagon. So we rode in the Hudson touring car on our return trip. Both of these cars were loaned to us by the Hudson and Reo Companies in Lansing, Mich.

Monday we dined with the famous African hunter and explorer, Major Burnham, met "Doug" Fairbanks and saw his big studio, saw two movies being taken, and Mr. Mills, our manager, and I spoke over KFWB. CROSBY BOYS CONFESS SERIES OF ROBBERIES

Caught With Stolen Car in Possession on Highway Near Trommald

ABANDON ONE CAR

Charges Include Breaking in at Crosby Creamery, Two Garages, Oil Company and Two Stores

Two Crosby boys, both 15 years old, were held in the county jail today awaiting hearing September 18 in juvenile court on a series of charges of robbery in Crosby and Ironton.

Confessions made by the boys to Sheriff Claus A. Theorin indicate that the boys had been operating for some time and had completely baffled the police until the two were arrested by Chief of Police Hasskamp, of Crosby, with a stolen car in their possession.

The arrest of the two will clear up a number of robberies on the range which police had been working on for some time.

The boys, according to their confession, broke into the Crosby Creamery Co. early in the morning of September 11 and stole a box of butter. From there the two went to the Laviator garage, broke in, and stole a 1928 Essex car and a radio set. The dial of the safe was knocked off but no money was taken. Shortly after taking the Essex car the two broke into the Humphrey garage, Crosby, and stole a Hudson car, the confession continues. Later the two entered the Home Oil Co., Crosby, stealing oil and gasoline.

The two then drove the cars to Trommald where the Hudson car had a blowout in one of the tires and exhausted its gasoline supply. Chief of Police Hasskamp arrested the two at 6 a. m. the same morning on a highway near Trommald while they were in the Essex car.

Further questioning by Sheriff Theorin revealed that the youths entered the Iverson and Johnson store at Ironton early this summer, stole $10 in cash, and broke into Cox's store, Crosby, on July 3, stealing a supply of firecrackers for a Fourth of July celebration.

The two further admitted breaking into the Standard Lumber Co. at Crosby this summer and while they knocked off the dial on the safe they failed to get any money.

Further questioning will take place today regarding other robberies in the range area this summer to ascertain the part, if any, the boys had in them.

LIONS HEAR TWO DISCUSS FOOTBALL

James Alderman Tells of B. H. S. Team Success Twenty Years Ago

CO-OPERATION GIVEN

Coach Warren Kasch Outlines Prospects for 1928 Grid Squad

Football as it was played twenty years ago and football as it is today in the Brainerd high school was the subject of interest discussed by James Alderman, one of local high's prominent football players of early fame, and Coach Warren Kasch of the B. H. S. faculty, at the Lions club meeting last evening.

Mr. Alderman took the Lions back 20 years, picturing the Brainerd high school team of 1908 when he was one of the ends on the team that won all of its games in the season, vanquishing teams from Duluth, St. Cloud and other strong elevens in the state.

He contributed much of the success of the team that year to the whole-hearted support by the faculty of the school and the citizens of Brainerd. He then recalled the history of the same squad in 1909 when the team lost the majority of its games during the season which was partly due to the lack of support on the part of the citizens of Brainerd.

Mr. Alderman urged the Lions to give the Brainerd high school team of this year their whole-hearted support, knowing that if the team receives the confidence of the city, the players will be in a better position to give their best.

Coach Kasch reviewed the candidates and the prospects of the season. He reported that 45 regulars were out and that the chances look to be as good if not better than last year. He stressed his work of building up secondary teams in order that high school squads of the future will not be picked from entirely new material.

FRED F. WISE DIES SUDDENLY

Passed Away at His Home in Baxter Township Last Evening After Brief Illness

LIVED HERE 30 YEARS

Survived by Mother, Five Brothers and Two Sisters; Born in Pierz 40 Years Ago

Fred Frank Wise, 40 years old, died at 7:30 o'clock last evening from pneumonia at his home in Baxter township a few hours after he had returned from a trip to Brainerd to secure medical attention.

and the costly car way it is built

The most important part of your car—is the part you never see! But now we are especially displaying an Essex chassis to show the costly, fine-quality way it is built.

If you could place it—first, beside a $3,000 make of chassis—and then beside a chassis in the Essex price range—you would have dramatic, visual proof of the fine-car Essex construction, as distinguished from the practice of cars in its price field.

You would find the same steering wheel of hard rubber and steel core in Essex and the $3,000 car. You would find the same Timken tapered wheel bearings, the same roller tappet bearings, the same use of five cross members in the rigid frame. Cars of Essex price class usually economize with mushroom tappet bearings, ordinary roller bearings in the wheels, and three cross members in the frame.

Aside from such self-evident superiorities as its brilliant performance, beauty and quality that you can see and feel in the very upholstery, the wheel you handle and the hardware you touch—please compare with any car—the advantages we have itemized here because they speak for the complete quality way in which the new Essex Super-Six is built—things seen or unseen.

CROSBY BOYS CONFESS SERIES OF ROBBERIES

Caught With Stolen Car in Possession on Highway Near Trommald

ABANDON ONE CAR

Charges Include Breaking in at Crosby Creamery, Two Garages, Oil Company and Two Stores

Two Crosby boys, both 15 years old, were held in the county jail today awaiting hearing September 18 in juvenile court on a series of charges of robbery in Crosby and Ironton.

Confessions made by the boys to Sheriff Claus A. Theorin indicate that the boys had been operating for some time and had completely baffled the police until the two were arrested by Chief of Police Hasskamp, of Crosby, with a stolen car in their possession.

The arrest of the two will clear up a number of robberies on the range which police had been working on for some time.

The boys, according to their confession, broke into the Crosby Creamery Co. early in the morning of September 11 and stole a box of butter. From there the two went to the Lavictor garage, broke in, and stole a 1928 Essex car and a radio set. The dial of the safe was knocked off but no money was taken. Shortly after taking the Essex car the two broke into the Humphrey garage, Crosby, and stole a Hudson car, the confession continues. Later the two entered the Home Oil Co., Crosby, stealing oil and gasoline.

The two then drove the cars to Trommald where the Hudson car had a blowout in one of the tires and exhausted its gasoline supply. Chief of Police Hasskamp arrested the two at 6 a. m. the same morning on a highway near Trommald while they were in the Essex car.

Further questioning by Sheriff Theorin revealed that the youths entered the Iverson and Johnson store at Ironton early this summer, stole $10 in cash, and broke into Cox's store, Crosby on July 3, stealing a supply of firecrackers for a Fourth of July celebration.

The two further admitted breaking into the Standard Lumber Co. at Crosby this summer and while they knocked off the dial on the safe they failed to get any money.

Further questioning will take place today regarding other robberies in the range area this summer to ascertain the part, if any, the boys had in them.

LIONS HEAR TWO DISCUSS FOOTBALL

James Alderman Tells of B. H. S. Team Success Twenty Years Ago

CO-OPERATION GIVEN

Coach Warren Kasch Outlines Prospects for 1928 Grid Squad

Football as it was played twenty years ago and football as it is today in the Brainerd high school was the subject of interest discussed by James Alderman, one of local high's prominent football players of early fame, and Coach Warren Kasch of the B. H. S. faculty, at the Lions club meeting last evening.

Mr. Alderman took the Lions back 20 years, picturing the Brainerd high school team of 1908 when he was one of the ends on the team that won all of its games in the season, vanquishing teams from Duluth, St. Cloud and other strong elevens in the state.

He contributed much of the success of the team that year to the whole-hearted support by the faculty of the school and the citizens of Brainerd. He then recalled the history of the same squad in 1909 when the team lost the majority of its games during the season which was partly due to the lack of support on the part of the citizens of Brainerd.

Mr. Alderman urged the Lions to give the Brainerd high school team of this year their whole-hearted support, knowing that if the team receives the confidence of the city, the players will be in a better position to give their best.

Coach Kasch reviewed the candidates and the prospects of the season. He reported that 45 regulars were out and that the chances look to be as good if not better than last year. He stressed his work of building up secondary teams in order that high school squads of the future will not be picked from entirely new material.

Broadway Love

by Thomas Edgefow

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

JANET WILDE is the daughter of Fenimore Wilde, one of Broadway's favorite actors. His son Frank is an idler and a spendthrift, so Janet has a hard time mothering both of them. Although the father's income is large, he is constantly in hot water. On the eve of a great opening night he is thrown into a rage by a creditor and has a heart attack. Janet, on the same day, goes to luncheon with Gordon Pryor, a young but impecunious actor, who proposes to her. She accepts, but in the restaurant she meets a young musician who excites the actor's jealousy. This man, Leonard Quigg, attracts Janet greatly. Janet's father drops dead after a brilliant performance, leaving her and her brother almost penniless. Gordon Pryor breaks his engagement and Janet realizes that it was her father's prestige and not love for her that first attracted him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XII.
GORDON threw a hostile glance in Janet's direction. The fact that she looked so charming, sitting there in a low chair, holding the telephone, made him feel yet cheaper.

"You will probably be talking for a long time, as it's Leonard Quigg on the wire," he said angrily, "so I think I'll go along." "Hold the line a minute, will you?" Janet said into the receiver. She put down the telephone, and advanced towards Gordon, who had already put on his coat.

"Goodbye, Gordon," she said with assumed cordiality, "and don't feel too badly about this. It's a curious way to break an engagement—while one is in the middle of a telephone conversation, but it's much the best."

She held out her hand, and Gordon took it limply in his own. "Yes—it's better this way," he attempted in a gruff voice, and then became flippant. "Well, at least this saves lawyer's fees for a divorce later on—if we had really gone through with it."

Janet did not reply to this sally. "Goodbye," she said casually, and waited until she heard the outer door close. Then she went back to the telephone, out of humor with all of the opposite sex, so that the poor, unoffending Leonard wondered at the chill of her voice.

"Someone was just going out, so I had to ask you to hold the line," Janet said coldly. "What is it?"

"What an awful question to ask anyone when he telephones!" Leonard complained. "I only rang up to say that I got your number with some difficulty, and I was wondering if I could see you?"

"Oh, I suppose so—some time," Janet answered, feeling rather pleased she was in a position to snub one of the sex that had so annoyed her. "Do you want to see me about anything in particular?"

"Oh, something very particular! But I'll telephone some other time when you are in a more receptive mood. Sorry to have troubled you," and he hung up the receiver.

This infuriated Janet, as there are few things quite so irritating in life as to have the other fellow hang up on you. You always wish you had done it first.

But having sat still for a little, Janet began to regret having been quite so cold to Leonard. It hadn't been his fault that he had rung at precisely the wrong moment, and she began to smile when she thought of how snappish she had been with him. As regards Gordon, well, Janet simply decided to forget him, while at the same time she felt infinitely happier in that the engagement was broken.

Instead, she was going to think about a job. Therefore, Janet was up early the following morning and by half past ten was in the waiting-room of the John Montague offices.

The secretary, a woman who looked like a horse, seemed to have a cultivated dislike for everybody in general, and for Janet in particular.

"I want to see Mr. Montague, please," Janet said. The horse-like woman sneered, and instantly looked more like a camel than a horse.

"You want to see Mr. Montague, do you?" she said with amused contempt. "And what did you want to see him about?"

Janet, who was human, had to fight down a rising desire to smack the camel-woman's face. "I'd give anything," Janet told herself in her heart, "just to smack her once."

Aloud, she said: "It's an entirely personal matter."

At that moment a funny-looking little wizened man came hobbling into the room, and the secretary's manner changed instantly. Ignoring Janet, she smiled at the newcomer.

"Good morning, Mr. Hume," she said ingratiatingly. "Yes, Mr. Montague's in, and very busy—but never too busy to see you, Mr. Hume."

She got up from her place, and opened a door a few inches, through which the little man disappeared.

"If Mr. Montague is in," Janet said, with rising temper, "why couldn't you say so?"

"He's always in to Mr. Hume," the woman explained. "He'd be in to you if you could take hold of a show that was a flop and turn it into a success. I asked you before, and I ask you again—what do you want to see him about?"

"A personal matter," Janet insisted. "Just tell him that Miss Wilde would like to see him."

"I'm sorry, Miss Wilde," the camel-woman said, purposely mis-calling Janet, "but Mr. Montague can't see you this morning. Drop round again next month, and I'll see what can be done."

But, when she needed it most,

luck was with Janet. At that moment the door of John Montague's private office opened, and he stood there talking to Hume.

"Then run out to Stamford and see it," he was saying. "You may be able to do something, but I doubt it. That show was—" he paused as he caught sight of Janet. He came quickly towards her, hand outstretched.

"Why, Miss Wilde! I am so glad to see you," he said loudly, and Janet had the satisfaction of reading consternation on the face of the secretary, who was now looking more like a horse than a camel.

"Have they been keeping you waiting?" He turned on the secretary. "When will you learn who I will see and who I won't?" he thundered. "This is Miss Janet Wilde! Memorize her, will you? I am always eager to see Miss Wilde at any time!"

"Yes, Mr. Montague," the tamed secretary said meekly. "Come in," John Montague invited Janet, "and the next time you come here send your name in at once." He showed her into his private office, leaving her alone for a moment as he had a few parting words with Hume.

The Montague offices were next door to the Montague theatre, and Janet had heard that Montague had an apartment somewhere high up in the building. She looked around the room in which she found herself. It was much more like a luxuriously furnished living-room than a business-like office.

Montague came back into the room, closing the door after him. She looked a little nervously at the stockily-built man, rather below medium height. Again she noticed the intensely marked black eyebrows, and the big beak of a nose, the nearly bald head, and the fringe of black hair.

"I wonder you haven't come to see me before," he said in his rasping voice. "Sit down. Have a drink?"

"No, thank you," Janet refused. "A little champagne?" Without waiting for her reply, he walked to a wall, touched a button, and the panel slid away revealing a miniature but perfectly-equipped bar. "What will it be?" he asked, taking off his coat, and standing behind the bar.

Janet entered into the humor of the situation. She didn't want anything, and despite the tendency of today when so many young girls carry flasks she did not even like liquor; but laughing, she walked up to the bar and put her foot on the rail.

"I'd like what you haven't got," she said. "There isn't anything I haven't got," he bragged, rather boyishly. "Anything from a New Orleans fix—made as it should be made—to a glass of Tokay! Just try me! We aim to please."

"Are you sure, Mr. Montague?" Janet teased him. "Have you anything I care to ask for?"

"Sure! Now, what will it be?" "I think then," Janet requested musically, "that I would like—yes, I would like a really good job!"

Mrs. Winslow's SYRUP

Broadway Love

by Thomas Edgefow

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

JANET WILDE is the daughter of Fenimore Wilde, one of Broadway's favorite actors. His son Frank is an idler and a spendthrift, so Janet has a hard time mothering both of them. Although the father's income is large, he is constantly in hot water. On the eve of a great opening night he is thrown into a rage by a creditor and has a heart attack. Janet, on the same day, goes to luncheon with Gordon Pryor, a young but impecunious actor, who proposes to her. She accepts, but in the restaurant she meets a young musician who excites the actor's jealousy. This man, Leonard Quigg, attracts Janet greatly. Janet's father drops dead after a brilliant performance, leaving her and her brother almost penniless. Gordon Pryor breaks his engagement and Janet realizes that it was her father's prestige and not love for her that first attracted him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XII.
GORDON threw a hostile glance in Janet's direction. The fact that she looked so charming, sitting there in a low chair, holding the telephone, made him feel yet cheaper.

"You will probably be talking for a long time, as it's Leonard Quigg on the wire," he said angrily, "so I think I'll go along." "Hold the line a minute, will you?" Janet said into the receiver. She put down the telephone, and advanced towards Gordon, who had already put on his coat.

"Goodbye, Gordon," she said with assumed cordiality, "and don't feel too badly about this. It's a curious way to break an engagement—while one is in the middle of a telephone conversation, but it's much the best."

She held out her hand, and Gordon took it limply in his own. "Yes—it's better this way," he attempted in a gruff voice, and then became flippant. "Well, at least this saves lawyer's fees for a divorce later on—if we had really gone through with it."

Janet did not reply to this sally. "Goodbye," she said casually, and waited until she heard the outer door close. Then she went back to the telephone, out of humor with all of the opposite sex, so that the poor, unoffending Leonard wondered at the chill of her voice.

"Someone was just going out, so I had to ask you to hold the line," Janet said coldly. "What is it?" "What an awful question to ask anyone when he telephones!" Leonard complained. "I only rang up to say that I got your number with some difficulty, and I was wondering if I could see you?"

"Oh, I suppose so—some time," Janet answered, feeling rather pleased she was in a position to snub one of the sex that had so annoyed her. "Do you want to see me about anything in particular?"

"Oh, something very particular! But I'll telephone some other time when you are in a more receptive mood. Sorry to have troubled you," and he hung up the receiver. This infuriated Janet, as there are few things quite so irritating in life as to have the other fellow hang up on you. You always wish you had done it first.

But having sat still for a little, Janet began to regret having been quite so cold to Leonard. It hadn't been his fault that he had rung at precisely the wrong moment, and she began to smile when she thought of how snappish she had been with him. As regards Gordon, well, Janet simply decided to forget him, while at the same time she felt infinitely happier in that the engagement was broken.

Instead, she was going to think about a job.

Therefore, Janet was up early the following morning and by half past ten was in the waiting-room of the John Montague offices.

The secretary, a woman who looked like a horse, seemed to have a cultivated dislike for everybody in general, and for Janet in particular.

"I want to see Mr. Montague, please," Janet said.

The horse-like woman sneered, and instantly looked more like a camel than a horse.

"You want to see Mr. Montague, do you?" she said with amused contempt. "And what did you want to see him about?"

Janet, who was human, had to fight down a rising desire to smack the camel-woman's face. "I'd give anything," Janet told herself in her heart, "just to smack her once."

Aloud, she said: "It's an entirely personal matter."

At that moment a funny-looking little wizened man came hobbling into the room, and the secretary's manner changed instantly. Ignoring Janet, she smiled at the newcomer.

"Good morning, Mr. Hume," she said ingratiatingly. "Yes, Mr. Montague's in, and very busy—but never too busy to see you, Mr. Hume."

She got up from her place, and opened a door a few inches, through which the little man disappeared.

"If Mr. Montague is in," Janet said, with rising temper, "why couldn't you say so?"

"He's always in to Mr. Hume," the woman explained. "He'd be in to you if you could take hold of a show that was a flop and turn it into a success. I asked you before, and I ask you again—what do you want to see him about?"

"A personal matter," Janet insisted. "Just tell him that Miss Wilde would like to see him."

"I'm sorry, Miss Wilde," the camel-woman said, purposely mis-calling Janet. "But Mr. Montague can't see you this morning. Drop round again next month, and I'll see what can be done."

But, when she needed it most,

luck was with Janet. At that moment the door of John Montague's private office opened, and he stood there talking to Hume.

"Then run out to Stamford and see it," he was saying. "You may be able to do something, but I doubt it. That show was—"

he paused as he caught sight of Janet. He came quickly towards her, hand outstretched.

"Why, Miss Wilde! I am so glad to see you," he said loudly, and Janet had the satisfaction of reading consternation on the face of the secretary, who was now looking more like a horse than a camel.

"Have they been keeping you waiting?" He turned on the secretary. "When will you learn who I will see and who I won't?"

He thundered. "This is Miss Janet Wilde! Remember her, will you? I am always eager to see Miss Wilde at any time!"

"Yes, Mr. Montague," the tamed secretary said meekly.

"Come in," John Montague invited Janet, "and the next time you come here send your name in at once." He showed her into his private office, leaving her alone for a moment as he had a few parting words with Hume.

The Montague offices were next door to the Montague theatre, and Janet had heard that Montague had an apartment somewhere high up in the building. She looked around the room in which she found herself. It was much more like a luxuriously furnished living-room than a business-like office.

Montague came back into the room, closing the door after him. She looked a little nervously at the stockily-built man, rather below medium height. Again she noticed the intensely marked black eyebrows, and the big beak of a nose, the nearly bald head, and the fringe of black hair.

"I wonder you haven't come to see me before," he said in his rasping voice. "Sit down. Have a drink?"

"No, thank you," Janet refused. "A little champagne?" Without waiting for her reply, he walked to a wall, touched a button, and the panel slid away revealing a miniature but perfectly-equipped bar. "What will it be?" he asked, taking off his coat, and standing behind the bar.

Janet entered into the humor of the situation. She didn't want anything, and despite the tendency of today when so many young girls carry flasks she did not even like liquor; but laughing, she walked up to the bar and put her foot on the rail.

"I'd like what you haven't got," she said.

"There isn't anything I haven't got," he bragged, rather boyishly. "Anything from a New Orleans fizz—made as it should be made—to a glass of Tokay! Just try me! We aim to please."

"Are you sure, Mr. Montague?" Janet teased him. "Have you anything I care to ask for?"

"Sure! Now, what will it be?" "I think then," Janet requested meekly, "that I would like—yes, I would like a really good job!"
